Clearing House Exhibit.

[illegible] May was a month of rapid transit from general hopefulness to serious distrust and disappointment. It is less than a month since the broad pages of the daily journals were loaded with … accounts, which, to superficial observers seemed at that time to have some foundation. To-day everybody realizes that the country is suffering somewhat severely from the effect of short crops, railroad war and excessive speculation, and that a turning point does not appear close at hand.

Chicago Chowder.

CHICAGO, June 9.—It is stated that the marked advance in July wheat yesterday was due to a corner in that option. Rumors on the board are to the effect that Armour, of this city, and Flankington, Kershaw and Young, of Milwaukee, have formed a syndicate for that purpose. [illegible]

SATURDAY MORNING, JUNE 10, 1882

AN ARISTOCRACY OF OFFICE HOLDERS.

[illegible] are not likely to become an aristocracy that would threaten the simple and modest spirit of free institutions.

In the Century magazine for June E. L. Godkin, the well known editor of the Nation, considers the only objection ever offered against civil service reform, namely, that continuance in office will create an aristocracy that will presently become more formidable than the evils of rotation in office with all its accompaniments of spoils-jobbing. He shows that in the early days of the republic when there were no removals from office except for cause no aristocracy of office-holders was created or feared. He holds that the "insolence of office" in European countries results from the fact that the officers are representatives of an actual aristocracy and naturally arrogate to themselves the airs of their superiors. No such cause existing in this country, the result would also be wanting. He holds that the men who can consent to serve for a lifetime in the majority of offices in this country will not command great respect from their fellow-citizens, and that without this respect the creation of an aristocracy is impossible. Self-esteem will not create an aristocracy. There must be respect from the great body of the people.

The question of civil service reform, of tenure of office, is becoming more important every year. The hungry horde of office-seekers who assail every administration is increasing yearly. The distress occasioned by the discharge of many minor office-holders and clerks, simply for the sake of a change, is heartrending. The inefficient service rendered by public servants who know their positions are dependent on political influence, and not upon good work, is daily adding to the cost of running the government. The time and talents of our legislators are wasted in efforts to secure places for political friends. Practically, congressmen devote their services to the interests of the one-tenth who are seeking office, leaving the interests of the mass of people to go uncared for.

Many of these evils would be obviated by making the tenure of all or nearly all offices depend upon good conduct and efficiency. Let the many thousand postmasters in the country feel that they can hold their positions as long as they are honest and efficient and the character of the postal service will be greatly improved. Relieved of the feeling of dependence upon a member of congress for his position, the postmaster will become more responsible to the people and certainly less liable to assume aristocratic airs than before. The same principle applies to the many clerkships under the government, to the numerous consulates scattered over the world, to nearly all the executive positions in the various departments.

The business of the government should be conducted on business principles. No employer would expect good services from an employee who knew that careful work and prompt attention would have no influence in keeping him in place. Bankers merchants, manufacturers, all would consider it the height of folly to conduct business on such a plan. Permanency of position and fair promotion are the incentives held out to every youth whatever his calling, to do good work for his employer. Why should the government be deprived of these influences? Why should our presidents be made liable to assassination by disappointed office-seeking cranks? Why should our legislators be forced into corruption in exchanging place for votes controlled by the office-seeker? Why should the national expenditures be increased in order to support ignorant men whose only claim to office is a little political influence? There is no good reason why these things should be and the sooner a radical reform takes place in this matter the better it will be for all parties. That efforts in this direction have not been very successful is no reason why these efforts should not be continued. No great reform was ever accomplished without many discouragements, and this is so necessary for the future welfare of our country that the good work should never be given up until success crowns the efforts of those who are working in the cause.

NOT YET RECONCILED.

It is not alone the Methodist bodies of the United States that are still kept asunder by differences which arose during the slave-holding period. The same is true, though to a less extent, of Presbyterian bodies. The Presbyterian general assembly of the United States, representing for the most part the Presbyterian churches of the northern states, has been holding sessions at Springfield, Ill. At the same time another organization, also calling itself a Presbyterian general assembly, but representing certain churches of the denomination in the south, though not all of them, has been in session at Atlanta, Ga. In the southern assembly the question of the relation of the two bodies was brought up for consideration on the presentation of a report from the proper committee on a proposition to send delegates to the general assembly at Springfield, to exchange salutations and express the willingness of the southern Presbyterian church to co-operate with that of the north in the work of foreign missions. The report was not, however, really friendly to intimate co-operation. It was, in substance, to the effect that while the committee was in favor of the exchange of mutual salutations toward their brethren of the north, and also of co-operation with them as far as practicable, they believed the assembly should draw a line as to the form of friendly correspondence employed. The reasons given for this view of the case were as follows:

1. Because they were in danger of inconsistency, should they go too far, it having been determined at several previous meetings of the body to decline the invitation of the northern assembly to send a visiting delegation to confer with them.
2. On the ground of right, the northern presbytery having made use of certain denunciatory expressions toward those of the south during the progress of the late war, which have never been retracted.
3. Because the establishment of the closest relations toward the northern church is apt to cause civil dissensions in the ranks of the southern body.

From this it would appear that while the members of the southern organization were disposed to tender and accept a cordial expression of good feeling toward their northern brethren, nevertheless they did not desire that the association should be too intimate until northern Presbyterians should first withdraw their condemnation of the course of certain church organizations in upholding slavery, secession and rebellion. This comes about as near being a contest over "dead issues" as we ever see in the course of political parties. Since the ghost of slavery can still keep the churches apart, what are we to expect of politicians?

Keely, the motor man, is more than an inventor. He is a magician. He has made $150,000 out of a machine that he swears he is "ready and willing to make." The machine which he makes go round with regularity and dispatch is the hat, and the shareholders have reached the conclusion that there is no crown to it. When the hat ceases to circulate and collect the Keely motor languishes.

BADLY HURT.

[illegible] Multnomah county and the [illegible] state holds a well known and prominent position in the service of the company, and got a vote far in excess of that received by any other candidate on the democratic ticket. But we do not think the company tried to elect him. Its position appears to have been entirely neutral; that is, it minded its own business and did not concern itself about the election. Had its managers taken any part, beyond that of voting as other citizens, their action would have been quite apparent and would have raised a general storm. It is evident from democratic comment in the eastern states that those who have the interests of that party as a national organization in their keeping, are badly hurt by the result in Oregon.

THE TARIFF ON WOOL.

Advocating "protection," the Dalles Times says: "The wool-growers of Eastern Oregon know fully that protection guarantees a good price for their clip, while free-trade strikes at the very life of the industry."

If this assertion were true still it would not prove the protective policy to be a just and wise one. High prices for wool make high prices for woolen goods; and there are twenty persons who wear woolen goods to one person who produces wool. Why should the twenty be taxed for the benefit of the one? Oregon is boasted as a wool-growing state, and so it is; and yet even in Oregon, there are twenty persons who want cheap clothes to one who wants dear wool. Here, in a dozen words of one syllable, is a complete and overwhelming answer to all the elaborate arguments ever made in the effort to show the alleged importance of "protecting" the wool-grower. But even the small wool-grower himself, he who has a few sheep, and whose annual clip is a few hundred pounds of wool, loses more by the enhanced cost of clothing for himself and family than he gains through the higher price for his wool; so that the actual beneficiaries of the system are only the great wool growers and the monopolist manufacturers.

There is no phase of "protection" that will bear examination. Every part of the system is as weak as the argument for the protection of wool. The system is, throughout, a superficial and short-sighted game of greed—except for the great monopolists whom it creates and supports. With them then it is a studied and profound game of greed, part of which is to make large classes suppose they are favored and protected by a system which either does not protect them at all, or actually robs them.

Attorney General Brewster has furnished to the president an official opinion that ex-Secretary Kirkwood is not eligible to appointment as a member of the tariff commission. His argument on the subject is as follows:

> Mr. Kirkwood was elected and qualified as a senator from Iowa, for the term which will expire March, 1883. In March, 1881, he resigned to accept the position of secretary of the interior, and having recently resigned this office, is now in private life. Since his second resignation, the office of tariff commissioner has been created by an act of congress, and the question is, whether in these circumstances, the second clause of the first article of Section 6 of the constitution of the United States, disqualifies him from appointment as such commissioner. The clause is: "No senator or representative shall, during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States which shall have been created during such time." The language is precise and clear, and in my opinion disables him (Kirkwood) from receiving the appointment.

The solicitor general has deposited with the attorney general a concurring opinion. The same argument would also apply to ex-Secretary Kirkwood's appointment on the Utah commission.

The crop reports from the southwest—Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas and Texas—are exceptionally promising as to wheat, corn and oats, and a far more than average yield of these staples seems to be assured. An increase of wheat acreage is noted both in Arkansas and Texas, while in the latter state the oats product promises to be the largest ever realized. From localities further north reports come of some rather hard frosts Saturday and Sunday nights, which inflicted some damage on gardens and early fruits, but have not injured the young corn to any considerable extent. There has been some snow in Minnesota and Dakota, and farming operations have been retarded by the cold and wet weather, but the general outlook is very gratifying.

The Philadelphia Times, until very lately, has ridiculed the idea that Senator Mitchell would make an actual fight against Cameron. It now says of Mitchell that "he has swung his reform ax to strike the bosses by striking the life-root of the stalwart system. He has seen it murder a beloved president; he has seen it sweep aside every reform left as a legacy by Garfield; he has seen republican purity and independence treated with contempt at home and ruthlessly crucified at Washington, and he sees that either republican manhood and republican reform or stalwartism must go." The temperature of Pennsylvania politics, it will be seen, is pretty high.

The Philadelphia Press calls the sentimentalists who are deploring the approaching execution of Guiteau people "whose hearts have been developed at the expense of their heads." This is much too mild. The editor of the Press probably wrote: "They are a lot of wretched, watery-eyed, weak-mouthed dyspeptic monomaniacs who have not sense to know right from wrong, nor courage to acknowledge it if they did. They have the heart of a jelly-fish and the brains of an alligator—which last is said to be heartless." Guiteau must hang.

The council has contracted for a dredge to be ready for service October 8. It should be seen that the work is hurried forward and that no delays occur. The boat will be seriously needed even before October.

[illegible] was [illegible] would be [illegible] Washington Territory. A number of [illegible] wealthy and influential citizens of Portland [illegible] interest was manifested [illegible]. A letter from the secretary of the Hebrew Aid Society of the United States, in New York, was read relating to the number and [illegible] of the immigrants. A permanent organization was then effected with Mr. B. Goldsmith as president and Dr. [illegible] secretary. An executive committee, consisting of Rev. A. Rosenspitz, [illegible] Hirsch, L. Blumauer, J. Loewenberg, S. [illegible], B. Selling, F. [illegible] Mellis, J. Jacobs, D. [illegible] and Ed. Kahn, were appointed to act in conjunction with the president and secretary, with full power to transact all business and issue calls for help, etc. After some informal discussion as to the refugees' colony, the location of lands, etc., the meeting adjourned to meet again at the call of the president.

Coming for Business.—The State of California left San Francisco Wednesday morning at 10:35, reached Astoria at 4:45 yesterday morning, discharged 51 tons of freight, left 5:45 and was docked here at 1:15 P. M., thus making the passage from dock to dock in 50 hours and 40 minutes, and beating the Columbia's best time an hour and 50 minutes. Several of her passengers destined for Puget Sound, boarded the Fleetwood at Astoria, made connection at Kalama with the Northern Pacific and reached New Tacoma 53 hours from San Francisco, a trip unprecedented in the history of navigation in Pacific waters.

Closing Exercises.—The closing exercises of the Bishop Scott grammar school took place last evening. The chapel of the school was well filled with friends of the pupils. The head master read his fourth annual report, which we will give in a day or so. The Rev. R. I. Stevens, of Albany, delivered a very able address, which was well received by the boys and which was full of instruction to those just entering active life. From the report we learn that the school is in a flourishing condition and meriting well deserved success.

Recaptured.—The Mexican who was imprisoned at Roseburg for stealing horses and broke jail was recaptured Thursday night near Cottage Grove by Sam Veatch and Chas. Clarke, constables of Cottage Grove. When taken he was standing in the Coast Fork river, and it is supposed he had been endeavoring to escape by following that stream. A reward had been offered for him.

Acquitted by a Jury.—Minnie Barton, who was arrested the other day, charged by Mrs. Mary Glenn with stealing silks and laces while in the latter's employ, was tried yesterday before Justice H. W. Davis and a jury. [illegible] it was shown in evidence that the goods found in Miss Barton's possession were the property of Mrs. Glenn, the jury acquitted the prisoner.

Excursion to the Cascades.—The steamer Manzanillo will leave the Morrison street wharf to-morrow morning at [illegible] for the Cascades. Ample time will be given for visiting all points of interest before returning. The steamer will land at the foot of the rapids on the Oregon side, near the railroad track. Returning, the steamer will leave at 2 P. M.

Taylor Street M. E. Church.—The Sunday evening service will begin, until a public notice of a change in time, at 6 o'clock. The first half hour will be devoted to song. Preaching will commence at 6:30 o'clock. The entire service will be held in the audience room, and will close by half past seven.

The Unitarian Excursion.—The committee having in charge the annual summer excursion of the Unitarian Sunday schools, have decided upon Saturday, June 17th, weather permitting, and tickets will be furnished the children to-morrow by their teachers.

Official Returns.—The official vote of Multnomah county and other election news of interest have been crowded over to the fourth page of this morning's Oregonian.

Lecture.—Mrs. F. Williams will deliver her second lecture to ladies and gentlemen this evening at the Unitarian chapel. Subject: "John Stuart Mill."

ARRIVAL OF MADAME RIVE-KING.

The steamship State of California, which arrived yesterday, brought the famous American pianist, Madame Julie Rive-King and her entire company of ten persons. They are stopping at the St. Charles hotel. The sale of seats for single concerts, which began yesterday morning, is progressing very rapidly, a steady stream of people filing up to Prentice's nearly all day. This is a flattering tribute to Madame King and a large and fashionable audience is already assured to her upon her opening night next Monday at New Market theater.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

The business which the Jay Rial Ideal company have done with this play during the past week in Portland is beyond the most sanguine expectation, and proves how strong a hold it has upon the minds of the amusement loving public. Every night this week and at the Wednesday matinee, the theatre has been filled to its utmost seating capacity and the interest taken by the audiences in the performance has increased with each presentation. There will be a grand matinee this afternoon, and to-night they give their farewell performance.

LITERARY AND SOCIAL ENTERTAINMENT.

The Open Temperance society will give a most pleasing entertainment at their hall next Saturday evening. The exercises will consist of readings and music, both vocal and instrumental, by some of the best local talent. Among those who will participate in the exercises are Mr. W. H. Kinross, Dr. O. B. Bird, Mrs. Josie Johnson, the Misses Lizzie Anderson, Sonora Witherell, May Quigley, Anna Wilhelm and others. Don't forget the time and place—Saturday evening, June 10th, at the hall on Morrison street, between Third and Fourth. Tickets, 25 cents. After the exercises refreshments will be served, and the remainder of the evening will be passed in social converse.

IN THE CITY.

All merchants on Front street between Alder and F have made preparations to raise their stocks from the floor, though the river lacks from 15 to 30 inches of reaching them. A dozen or more houses have already gone to the expense of moving their goods higher, notably the hardware and grocery houses. The office floor of the Clarendon hotel, which stands lower than any other building in that neighborhood, is still [illegible] inches above water. Most of the frame buildings on First street between B and F were raised [illegible] this spring, and as the street was also raised and [illegible] paved with Belgian block, merchants on the west side of the street will not suffer this year, unless the water reaches the [illegible] mark.

It is a matter of regret that the Western Union Telegraph company could not find means to keep their line up between Portland and The Dalles. If it be true that the Snake river has ceased to rise, and that the cool weather since Tuesday has checked the flood, the fact should have been known here two days ago. This knowledge would have saved many hundred dollars to those who have bought material and made preparations to move. It takes [illegible] hours for a rise at Umatilla to reach Portland, and experience has shown that unless there will affect the Willamette [illegible] preparations can be made two days in advance. Whatever is done now is merely [illegible], not on positive data.

[illegible]

The river here rose in the 24 hours ending at 1 o'clock this morning, ten inches, and the Stark street gauge read 24 feet 11 inches, within [illegible] inches of the 1876 mark. Wednesday and Thursday's rise at the Cascades has reached the Walla Walla, and the [illegible] reported Friday morning will have [illegible] out by to-night, effecting the river here about [illegible] inches. Assuming the above mentioned reports by passengers to be correct, taking into consideration that the upper Willamette will not add to the [illegible], and the considerable evaporation over the entire width, the lower Willamette will [illegible] that [illegible] [illegible] this pass.

RUN UNDER SLOW BELLS.

Masters of steamboats are earnestly requested, while passing the city, considering the present flood, to run under slow bells. The E and Water street bridges in East Portland are all at just swells from boats tend to weaken them. Several lumber piles and slight buildings are likewise affected by the motion, which may be easily avoided, if the above precaution is observed.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

PREPARATION FOR THE FAIR.

[illegible]

Hillsboro, June [illegible].

There seems to be more horses on the fair grounds than ever known before. Fourteen arrived from Walla Walla yesterday and have taken stalls on the society's premises. Mr. Lindsay, the society's president, has had to put 12 more stalls up, as [illegible] thinks from the number yet to arrive he will have to put up as many more. The track is in fine condition, and from the general tone of the people of this county this will be the best fair ever held in Washington county.

The farmers are feeling jubilant over the recent heavy rains and say that it came just right, and [illegible] the Lord and the Germans were always on good terms.

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING JUNE 10 188?

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST.

Eastern Oregon.

There is soon to be a postoffice at Meacham station

Rattlesnakes are numerous in the land about Prineville

Crickets and grasshoppers are numerous in the vicinity of Echo Umatilla Co

Wasco county farmers fear that the grain crop will be short on account of the dry weather

Limestone of excellent quality has been found in limited quantities a few miles north of Prineville

Earle oldest son of M L Olmstead was drowned at Canyon City on the 5th ult aged about 14 years The lad was bathing with his playfellows when he was taken with cramp and sank His body was recovered an hour later

Grant county News Last year it was said that all the cattle in the country had been sold and driven out of the country but more cattle are passing eastward through the John Day valley this year than ever before Recently at Mount Vernon the public school had to be dismissed the roads being so blockaded by cattle that the children could not reach the school house A band of about 1,000 horses also passed up the valley this week on its way to Montana.

A Mount Vernon Grant county correspondent writes under date of May 26th The harvest of fleece has begun in earnest One day last week M Bailey sheared 119 sheep T Conrad 103 and J Knox 100 at Stacher & Mullen's The wool clip is not as heavy this year as it was last on account of the cold backward spring which has made the wool dry and caused it to be devoid of the usual amount of oil It was thought that there would be a great loss of lambs during the cold weather of last month but sheep owners were happily disappointed in this respect. Droves of cattle are passing here daily to the great detriment of local stockowners The prospect for crops is poor as the late frosts injured them considerably There are now five horses here in training under skillful drivers

Prineville News From Willow Creek comes the report that the grasshoppers have suddenly made their appearance in the grain fields of that section and are doing great damage to the growing crops Some idea of the damage done by these insects can be gained by the following from a gentleman who lives on Willow Creek He was the happy possessor of a fifteen acre piece of wheat that was growing nicely and promised an abundant yield of grain In two days after the hoppers began their operations he had five acres of grain left standing and the rest of the field looked as bare as the street—not a vestige remaining of what had been Other farms were being visited by the same devastation but the destruction is not general. In other places crickets are numerous, but we have not yet heard of any damage done by them Taking into consideration the late and unusual dryness of the season and added to this the appearance of the grasshoppers in the fields, the yield of grain will probably be rather light in many places this year

Washington Territory

About $30 000 have been expended in building bridges in Walla Walla county during the past three years.

A large tank has been put up on Yesler's wharf Seattle, which will be kept full of salt water by aid of the pumps in the new mill, to be used in sprinkling the streets during the dry, dusty weather Owing to the scarcity of fresh water the sprinkler is obliged to remain idle a portion of the time when badly needed. With the new arrangement, however this difficulty is obviated, and the dust along Front and Commercial streets can hereafter be easily kept down.

Post-Intelligencer S B Geddis, accompanied by six Klickitat Indians, arrived in Seattle Tuesday with 180 head of beef cattle from the ranch of Geo Smith, in the Kittitas valley. Mr Geddis found the streams along his route swollen bank full and also encountered eight feet of snow on the summit of the mountains. The Snoqualmie river is said to be higher than ever before known at this season of the year. Sixteen head of cattle were lost on the road some from drowning, and the remainder from poisoning. Mr. Geddis has driven over the mountains for many years, but he declares this trip to be the roughest one he has ever experienced. Knowing that another band of 250 head was about to start over, Mr. Geddis sent two of his Indians back to report the difficulties to be encountered and to advise the drivers to postpone starting for at least 10 or 15 days, if possible. Snow on the summit is eight feet deep, and extends for 25 miles along the route

Western Oregon.

Water is too high for fishing at the Willamette falls.

The Imperial mills at Oregon City have been shut down for repairs

A large new dye house will soon be built at the rear of the woolen mills, to replace the old one which is entirely too small and inconvenient for the immense amount of business now being done there

English and French country markets—Quiet

Liverpool spot—Dull

EASTERN FREIGHT SITUATION

New York, June 8.—So far as the general freight market is concerned there is nothing new to write. Ships are doing fairly, as deliveries of railroad iron are more free. Parties with whom rail contracts are pending are also doing considerable for the season. Rates are steady for the time being but for the next month are easier. Whether this is the result of fear on the part of agents that shippers of heavy hardware may make contracts with railroads or is the natural result of having cheaper cost vessels can not be determined, but certain it is that agents are somewhat disturbed at negotiations pending between railroad agents and certain merchants, and orders have been sent representatives of lines now in San Francisco to close certain lots of freight at rather lower figures than are current here. Tonnage is still in full supply and at easier rates than have been current for a long time. The ship Anna Camp, hence for San Diego, has a cargo of railroad material for the California and Southern road. The Halicon, hence for Portland, has a full cargo of rails, etc., for the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company. The steamer Queen of the Pacific has sailed for San Francisco. Her cargo is mainly coal and railroad supplies.
